A Message from Rev Anne Cox

A few years ago the gravel leading to our garage was getting very thin so we ordered some more and it came in a big bag. We, with much toing and froing, managed to spread it over the old pebbles and were pleased with our labours.

I loved looking at the different colours each of them from rocks found in many parts of the country. I am not a geologist but recognised quartz, flint, limestone, granite with sparkly bits and green slate from the Lake District. There is also red, black and brown. Each, apart from the flint which shatters easily, are round edged ground down by rubbing together in water. My gravel was once the beach of an ancient sea.

Gazing down at the mosaic of pebbles I spotted the familiar outline of a Devil's Toenail. These are very common in the rocks around Alkborough, the other side of the Humber, but here they were in my driveway.

Having found one I now scan the pebbles looking for more. So far I think the total is over seven. Devil's Toenails, Gryphaea, are fossilised bivalved mollusks living in warm seas between 200 and 66 million years ago and here I am holding one in my hand.

How great is our Creator God. As the writer of Psalm 90 said:- Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever you had formed the earth and the world, from everlasting to everlasting you are God.

Yours, lost in wonder, love and praise Anne
